

Metaphors help us build a model of understanding phenomena. They are constituents of such knowledge frameworks and thus are responsible for their construction.
“(…) as metaphors necessarily involve another icon and thus model, they can be regarded as meta-models that allow us to experiment with the consequences of using something as a model for another thing.”

Lattmann, C. (2018). Iconizing the Digital Humanities. Models and Modeling from a Semiotic Perspective. Historical Social Research / Historische Sozialforschung. Supplement, (31), 124–146. <https://www.jstor.org/stable/26533633>